

---

Subject: Re: LSAF 2011

Posted by Wayne Parham on Thu, 19 May 2011 18:13:54 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

You might be right about being near the elevator. I've always been somewhere down the hall, once in the corner and once on the odd floor. This time, I was right at the entrance and it makes sense that would tend to increase traffic.

I empathize with you on the cold. I got one too, started feeling it Saturday night and by late Sunday night when I got home, I felt terrible. Just now starting to feel a little better.

One thing I learned early on about these shows is to keep it simple. Show one system and present it well.

I used to bring more than one system and I agree with you about the packing hassle. It's also double the setup and takedown time. And since I can only be in one room at a time, one room is basically unmanned. That's OK, I suppose, but it does divide my focus and make everything harder.