I've kind of relegated duties to Steven Sollazzo, who graciously offered to take the baton for a while. I'd been carrying it for about a decade and wanted to take a breather and just get a room each year for a while. So Steven has been maintaining the website and answering email and phone requests.

I'll admit I haven't really watched the website lately, but I have monitored the emails and there have been a flurry of them in the past six weeks or so. It usually starts winding up around this time each year. So Steven is probably busy responding to emails and what-not and just hasn't had time to update the website.
