I think making the right choice of speakers should first of all be about the sound quality, price vs. value, and the space that is in your place and not mostly about popularity even though it is a factor that shows many are using a particular brand.

I've got the Klipsch RF-7 III floorstanders in my place, and the whole audio experience has been fantastic. You can set up a complete system around them like I did using Klipsch RP-504C II center for voices, Klipsch SPL-120 for bass and RP-502S II surrounds for effects.

This setup can work greatly for both music and movie moments, giving you that cinematic feeling if you got the room treatment right.

The only challenge you are going to have with this setup is whether you've got enough space at your place. If you've got a limited space, maybe you can check Sonos Arc Ultra because it can fit into smaller rooms unlike the Klipsch RF-7 floorstanders.
