
Subject: Laserdisc and surround sound nostalgia
Posted by Damon73 on Tue, 28 Aug 2012 01:25:42 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

My first experience with a decent home theater was at a friends house. He was the only guy I knew who ever had a Laserdisc player. I have to admit, I thought the technology was pretty cool at the time. He was also the first of our friends to have a good surround sound system. Do you have any fond or unusual memories of an old home theater?

Subject: Re: Laserdisc and surround sound nostalgia
Posted by Chicken on Wed, 19 Sep 2012 13:55:55 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

An old family friend had a VCR and a big projector with a screen on the wall. His entire movie room (which was in the basement) was filled with VCRs, 2 comfortable couches, and an old-fashioned popcorn maker.

Subject: Re: Laserdisc and surround sound nostalgia
Posted by Damon73 on Mon, 24 Sep 2012 22:44:31 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

That sounds like a great basement theater. I always thought a nice basement would be a good place to watch movies because they are a bit isolated and dark. The popcorn maker must have been a fun bonus too.

Subject: Re: Laserdisc and surround sound nostalgia
Posted by Chicken on Fri, 28 Sep 2012 17:40:24 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Yes it was dark and very cool down there, to the point where we often cuddled up with a blanket. We loved having the popcorn.
