
Subject: Recycled vinyl records
Posted by voyager1 on Sat, 03 Sep 2016 19:52:34 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I just ran across this new abomination - recycled record art! People are taking vinyl records and making clocks, bookends, bowls, jewelry and all manner of things with them. Why? I would like to imagine that every one of these destroyed records was already scratched or warped before it was turned into someone's Father's Day gift, but really?

Subject: Re: Recycled vinyl records
Posted by gofar99 on Mon, 05 Sep 2016 21:30:33 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Well I suppose it is better than tossing them in the trash.

Subject: Re: Recycled vinyl records
Posted by Kingfish on Thu, 13 Oct 2016 23:01:19 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Exactly Bruce, what else can you do with them? I think its a great idea and I see the creative possibilities with this as being endless. I'll probably be back here soon with other recycling ideas.

Subject: Re: Recycled vinyl records
Posted by Odie on Sat, 24 Dec 2016 11:49:11 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I agree with you two. What else can you do with them? The market is flooded with old records so selling them is out of the question. Better to do something with them than trash them.

Subject: Re: Recycled vinyl records
Posted by Finn on Tue, 27 Dec 2016 15:00:01 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I actually received a clock made out of my favorite vinyl for my birthday one year. I thought it was a great way to honor one of my childhood memories. I'm sure that people look these over really well and they don't make them out of rare items.
