When it comes to technology and the internet, what is the one thing that you absolutely cannot live without? Mine is Google. I don't know what I would do without it.

I guess mine would be my smartphone. It's not super high-end but I rely a lot on it for work, time management and, of course, leisure.

My laptop. I couldn't live without it. I depend on it for work, playing games online, communicating with friends, shopping, listening to music, watching movies... the list goes on and on.

Mine would be my tablet. I don't know where I would be without it because there are so many different things that I can do on it. It's very convenient because I can take it anywhere to do my work which means I don't have to be stuck inside all day.

I have realized that I can never stay without my smartphone and laptop. There is no single day that has passed without me using these two. I guess some things become a part of us once we get used to using them.

I guess the verdict is in. We all couldn't live without our phones and the internet. I know it's a great way to keep connected and to get things done, but maybe we should take some time to consider if we're not using these things keep from really living our lives to the full.
