
Subject: Changing The Government.
Posted by Csharp on Sun, 20 Aug 2023 20:26:29 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Does anyone believe that voting actually works anymore? I truly believe that the government itself needs a complete overhaul and start new from scratch, but I really don't believe that voting is the answer anymore.

How else can it be done?

Subject: Re: Changing The Government.
Posted by Rusty on Sun, 20 Aug 2023 22:44:31 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

It's unfortunate that issues that public consensus want's addressed are left to the political parties compromised by campaign finance and lobbying to thrust & parry with one another usually ending in stalemate. And a controversial Supreme Court is used to break the impasse. Taking the public out of the loop of any decision. I'm for ending the archaic electoral college for presidential elections. But that's one of those sticky wickets that gets the kibosh.

I also think by the length of my rant below this topic that our economic doctrine needs a complete restructuring.

I still vote though if none other than, don't bitch if you won't make some effort to exercise your suffrage.

Subject: Re: Changing The Government.
Posted by gofar99 on Sat, 02 Sep 2023 02:59:05 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

We find ourselves in a "sticky wicket" A generally good system now in the hands of self serving individuals. The founding fathers likely envisioned that the leaders would be honorable and have the best interests of the country in mind. That doesn't seem to be the case. This is IMO something that has edged its way in over the past several years. Likely started around 1960 or so. No one individual or group is necessarily at fault. But we should collectively blame ourselves for not being engaged in what our government was doing and allowed it to erode into what it is now. How to get it back on track eludes me. I personally don't like any of the various proposals circulating. They all seem to be destructive not constructive. Just my two cents.

Subject: Re: Changing The Government.
Posted by Rusty on Sat, 02 Sep 2023 08:17:01 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Probably the greatest development happening now in decades to have this country pause and take stock in itself. The BRICS initiative.

<https://www.nytimes.com/2023/09/01/opinion/brics-expansion-america.html>
