Subject: Re: Who's watching the Geminids tonight?
Posted by Wayne Parham on Wed, 15 Dec 2004 04:09:42 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Yes, they're visible up north. The thing is that you have to be away from the city lights and have some patience. It's uncomfortable to watch when it's cold outside, unless you're in a car or something where it's warm. If you're taking a drive out in the country, you'll most likely see some tonight. But if you're in the city, the lights make them difficult or impossible to see.