PC audio is where I started my adventure with speakerbuilding.I was intrigued and still am by direct control of qualityspeakers from the soundcard.That said, I'm still connected to a receiver amp called the Yamaha RP U100. The Yam has a USB connection which allows control of the unit from the PC via onscreen software from Yamaha.I use audio streaming extensively especially for news. I am not in an area where the Pacifica Network of 300 media outletshas a free air outlet for news broadcasts such as Democracy Now.That's just voice, but I also like to listen to Nevada classicalpublic radio in Wisconsin.With the Winamp media player and its extensive plugins andskins, a set of good powered monitors should be able to connectdirectly to the PC setup.I think that a PC Sound forum would be well received, but the topicsare covered in these other forums especially gainclone and single driver and high eef speaks. Here is my favorite spin on PC speaks from the transmissionline forum:
