Subject: Re: Tone arm shapes Posted by Bill Martinelli on Thu, 29 Jul 2004 02:05:10 GMT View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I understand the Linn is a very nice deck. Thanks for the lead to Mr Kistners pages. I will check them out. I did find some info on building a tonearm and have lost the place temporarily. The Dynavector 5 is nice isn't it? A little over the top for me right now. I have a Grado and a Sure cart. So far I like the Grado on the Empire arm a little better. The Grado has better bass production and is more dynamic sounding. The Sure is more nuetral sounding and has a little more detail. Just some observations with a few 75.00 carts.It's s lot of fun and brings the relaxation level of listening to music to another level.Bill

Page 1 of 1 ---- Generated from AudioRoundTable.com