Total agreement; keep up with the AR posts if you can. They are informative and to my mind offer a step-up to those adventerous spirits who have experienced good vinyl and are looking to move up to a very good sounding and enjoyably involving project.To anyone with a yearning to start a project that pound for pound will get you the maximum increase in sound quality available for your audio budget forget every thing else and build a AR modded table with a good arm/cartridge. It will provide more musically satisfying results than any other DIY effort. And Russell has this down well and should he choose to provide a project photo history it will; in my opinion, be a worhty addition to the ART data bank.
