Thanks I am a R&D and inventor in audio, more particularly loudspeakers and Home Theater. I am also a writer. I gave a course in "Loudspeaker Theory" at CES in Las Vegas last week and it was a very big success. ALMA, the ones who set up the course, want to do it again in Europe. My questions are: How much interest is there in EU for the more advanced topics in loudspeakers? How many people would be interested in a two day course?, One day? Do people from other EU countries travel to courses like this, or should we only expect a more local attendance? The course will be in Barcelona in May, the two days before the AES conference. Any comments would be appreciated. Thanks
