My friend built some very wide baffle speakers that are ported. They sounded great. He then went to a fabric store, and wrapped them in this thick grill cloth. You can't even see through it with a flashlight! Now, his speakers sound muffled, and the bass went away! Can grill cloth actually effect the port tuning and make this much difference? His baffle is 3 feet wide, and 5 feet tall, so he needs a rather large piece of fabric. What should he do, and what might he use >?
