has anyone had any experience with the coaxial drivers from eminence? The 12 incher looks like you could apply a resister to the tweeter and make the response very flat. Is this a fact, or is my poor understanding of crossovers shining through? If put in a great encloser, do you think that they would sound remotely like Tannoys? Does anyone here have an opinion they would like to share obout Tannoy speakers? I've heard their (i believe) heritage series--it has the canterburry, westminster etc...--and it definitely stood out from the pack of "home" loudspeakers. I really want that sound, but don't want to spend any where near that price. Any advice? Thanks a lot in advance.
