It was a great time and Jim and his wife were absolutely wonderful hosts. Hopefully someone took some pictures and can post them, 'cause there were about 30 people there and at least that many pieces of equipment. I went just to relax, and made a little mini-vacation of it so I didn't take any pics. I hate my camera's lack of focus on close-up shots anyway. But there was a lot of really great hi-fi gear there, and Jim has about a zillion old tube radios too. I enjoyed being there immensely.
