Yes, you're right.  I should introduce you to Monte Vogt sometime.  A friend of mine for decades, he graduated from Tulsa University with a mechanical engineering degree.  He's the best I know of for car and automobile customization, knows engines and the rest of the vehicle completely.The reason I bring Monte up here is that he has no brand bias.  It's all the same stuff mushed into different shapes is pretty much his view.  I've seen him build wheel-standing 351 Cleveland Fords, and big-blocks and small blocks of every brand.  Vettes have been his latest flavor, but he's pretty much done 'em all, including Porsche's and riceburners.  He and I built the Olds motor in my Cutlass, and we have even built a few Wankle engines together.  Lots of fun in lots of cultures.
