

---

Subject: Re: I'm fascinated by the Double Horn Single driver speaker box
Posted by lon on Tue, 27 Jul 2004 03:33:03 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

http://fullrangedriver.com/tiki-download\_forum\_attachment.php?attId=27Try that and pste it into the box. It loads for me from bookmarks.I am frustrated. I just made a long message about backhorns and blew it off, so here goes again. Bill Fitzmaurice can help on these questions. Over yearshe has built a series of designs he calls the 'snails'.Snail one though... Snail 8 i think. These are speakers whichare designed to be high efficiency PA speaks for musicians. There is a snail build in the current (August 2004) audioXpress and on the cover as well. The snails have a woofer facing rearwards into a divided horn which comes outthe right and left side of the enclosure. Imagine the letter'M" from McDonalds and you'll get the idea. Terry Cain also has a concept like this. It looks likea standard BK16 from the Fostex manufacturer's design page_plus_ a mirror image backhorn coming out the top. Theyno doubt weigh a ton. Another over/under design is from Nelson Pass called the J-lo (also in audioXpress... I'll find the issue for you ifyou like) which uses a single Jordan 92s. I'm sending now so i son't lose this one. :-)

---