Your right; upon further reflection that post did come off as somewhat arrogant. You have a better understanding of this aspect of driver use and I defer to your judgement. Understand from where my position comes; that in fact I have always understood the purpose of a full range driver to be an attempt to avoid the deleterious effects of passive components on the speed and ability to resolve complex passages in the signal. As well as to represent a point source radiator. If it sounds better; it is better. Thanks for pointing that out; J.R.
