I, for one, find open baffles just amazing in their ability to give the impression of clarity, for lack of a better word openess, in the midrange.As you observe, you generally need help at the extremes - long throw woofers in the bass and some sort of tweeter at the top. But OBs seem to get the mids right, better than anything else I've done.I tried to find info on the 8130 - couldn't find anything. But the quality of JBL products in general is about as good as it gets.
