That's how it is here in Amarillo. There are about 3 guys here in town that seem to get most of the vintage stuff from every garage sale and estate sale. Always see it end up on ebay. I was at a garage sale last year and saw a pair of Klipsch Heresy's sitting up on a shelf in this guys garage collecting dust. Asked him if he wanted to sell them. He said to make him an offer so I did for about $200. They were in great shape. He said he'd think about it and to come by in an hour or two and I could probably get them. Well, as we can all guess he went in and checked ebay to see what they were going for and when I came back he wouldn't take less than $400 for them. Hadn't used them in 15 years he said. Jeesh! I wish he hadn't been out in the garage because his wife would have just given them to me to be rid of them.
