Say Fred; those Selah 8's go for about 4K$ in the kit form; is that right? That looks like about 6.5/7K$ built. That seems to put you in some pretty rarefied territory; at least in my neighborhood. What are your thoughts regarding this type of commitment to the Arrays on that spending level compared to what is out there in the same league? Off hand 4K$ would say get you a pair of well designed two-ways using TAD drivers. I use that as some kind of example. If you chose to buy used; I can think of some pretty good speaks out there. Is this something that would supercede what is commonly available at that price? Or is this the result of what you can do with whats on the market as kits regarding sound quality? I don't know if thats clear; maybe I should explain better? Thanks.
