My problem is not the figuring out of the appropriate combination of series and parallel wirings. I have an excel program that somebody sent me from PE Forum that tells me exactly what "groups of series speakers" have to be connected via parallel. My problem is that after I have wired it to the best of my meager non-anal ability that I may have inadvertently wired one of the black wires to the red side of the parallel lines, or that I wired two red ones together in the series line. I wanted to have a double check that I did it in an OK manner. Elvis
