Hopefully ! I think that there ain't too many adventurous line array builders out there .Most people are afraid of such projects , the only few who dared build those monsters did already and either are so satisfied that they attained the ultimate sound reproduction or so tired going through such a project that they need some vacation and just do not want to hear anything about it , or so disapointed after so many hours of labor that they got into depression !!!!!Every time you need to tweek or change something the effort is multiplied by 8 or by 10 , who wants to do that ???
