I know Jim Griffin and Rick Craig are using DEQX processor/active crossover , I am actually using DCX 2496 from behringer that already outperformed the passive crossover by a good margin , there is no doubt the difference is huge in price and quality , but some specialist can upgrade the DCX to very refined levels according to them like :ASi Technologies that is said to take the unit to an unbelievable level of transparency but at a price as high as 2000$ to 3000 $ .I'm willing to invest that amount in a high end processor for my line array for triamping .Need advise please .Thanks
