Not for anything, Wayne, but why don't you simply move your listening out of the bedroom completely. Even when listening to headphones, I prefer to be able to get up, turn on a light, change the music once in a while, grab something out of the fridge, etc. Besides, I've not yet met a wife that would tolerate even headphone listening in the bedroom. (Tried to post under Lonestar, but your server keeps saying I entered the wrong password. I'd already posted once using the password and subsequent replies don't have a password box to fill!)
