Look in the Tape forum. There have been some discussions there about the RT-909, and some include service information. I have one of those decks, and I have purchased owners and technical manuals, and have replaced pinch rollers. Some parts are still available for these decks and it's still a popular unit, so service and support is available. Check with the local repair shops. If you don't find anyone, there are some out-of-state places you can use.
