A buddy of mine offered to trade his Vox AC30 reissue for my Fender Super Reverb (silverface, not sure of the exact year). The Super Reverb needs new power tubes, but that's all that needs "fixing," if you can even call tube replacement fixing. I play mostly progressive rock and metal. I have a Squier C!! Standard Telecaster (X2N in the bridge, Texas Special in the neck), Ibanez RG350DX (stock humbuckers, Texas Special in the middle position), '78 Gibson Marauder (Invader in the neck, Texas Special in the bridge). I have a slew of distortion and overdrive pedals to choose from. I played the AC30 and found the tones I am looking for. I just wanted to know if either party is gonna get ripped off in this deal. Any help would be appreciated. Thanks, Greg
