There now just starting to hit the field, from reports I've read on them the 4000 and 8000 series are running good, there's been a few reports of problems with the 6000 series though. But like with any new technology there's bound to be some teathing problems at first but I'm sure Crown will have these worked out in no time at all. That's why I wait till an amps been in the field at least a year or two before purchaseing to make sure the manufactures have got the bugs worked out.Bill W.
