There is a difference between PAL and NTSC, so it may not work for you. But MPEG is universal, so you may not have a problem. It depends on what format they've used. In any case, converters and editors are available, so if the file is some sort of format you can't use, you can easily convert it.AVOne Video ConverterVisCom VideoEdit ConverterDVD RipperThere are a lot of other programs like that out there too, so you might look around. I use a hardware converter, which is nice when dealing with composite video. But since yours will be a file, you can probably grab one of these programs as a demo, use it for your conversion, and then let the evaluation period lapse.
