Subject: Re: Piffle
Posted by lon on Sun, 26 Mar 2006 19:38:03 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

We have old time radio around ehre that I think public radiogets on satellite feed. So I'm hearing the radioshows I was not old enough to hear but remember the tv showfrom real time. There are discussions about lots of things on the net... morepiffle than is conceivable. I picked a topic like this that I have a basic interest in not so much because I can do a lot of buildingbut because I have an interest in the design process-- as artand creativity. Sort of like kustom kars or motorcycles. Theselast two are 'guy things' I have no personal experience with at all.But the low rider thing fascinates me as an artistic expression. Something similar in the way of a group build is being doneon the Full Range Driver forum with a cnc operator using the designs of an audio engineer. Women would like this stuff more if you took out of contextand put it on display in an art gallery. I sort of had this experience at a show at the Calatrava-designed new space forthe Milwaukee Art Museum. We saw a display of craftsman projectsin wood and at that point I could expound on the work of James Krenov and sound like a big shot.