
Subject: Re: For a wood chassis, is glue enough?
Posted by Bill Epstein on Wed, 04 Oct 2006 23:05:22 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Glue is all you need, especially with a porous, non-oily wood like mahogany. As always, I recommend you put a coat of shellac on the outside of the miters to protect from squeeze-out. Then sand it off. Of course, amber shaellac you get at the Home Cemter makes a great finish for mahogany. Who needs spell-check; I can still spell Martini. Mmmmm.
