You are doing some good to the environment, cleaner emission and less frequent tune up with a low cost upgrade to electronic ignition. Did not have a chance to visit Russia yet but in the early 80s China were still using a lot of taxi made in Russia. You could smell the gasoline inside the cabin due to tune up long overdue. Not to mention their terrible driving habit. They never rev the engine over 2000 rpm, always stick to 3rd or 4th gear no matter how slow it was running, turning off engine while going downhill or along straights to save fuel. Look backing these were good memories!!Cheers,Stanley
