

---

Subject: Re: Cornerhorns

Posted by Wayne Parham on Wed, 31 Oct 2001 22:40:14 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

I suppose you could do that, but I've never been a fan of the idea of a single sub flanked by satellites. I wouldn't try to cover the whole bass range with a single woofer. Use at least two. The balance throughout the room and the large "sweet spot" it provides. They have a natural tendency to balance the stereo image over a fairly wide area in the center of the room. This is due to their uniform directivity and their 45° toe-in, causing the forward axis to cross. All these

---