Subject: Re: C5 & R3 values - accuracy of driver
Posted by Wayne Parham on Fri, 15 Mar 2002 17:15:56 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

A Zobel woofer damper is a very wide tolerance device. You can change values a great degree and not detect a difference in performance. See pages 61 and 62 of the crossover document, where it shows the difference between a damper using 7.35 and 10 ohms, and 20uF and 24uF. You can't tell 'em apart.