Yes, a polyetherthane glue, that is what it says on their website. I just picked up this stuff a few days ago at the local hardware store. I found some info on the site... they said don't get it on your hands. And don't worry, the stains will wear off in a few days! In the past, I had used yellow carpenter wood glues for speakers, and they seemed more than strong enough for the job. But I like the gap filling quality of this glue, even if the foamed glue in the gap adds no strength... it would make the joint airtight.
