Subject: Who is Peter Aczel?
Posted by MWG on Fri, 01 Sep 2006 03:52:51 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

From what I gather so far he is/was some sort of reviewer who crapped in his nest by touting a product he had financial interests in? Is he the only one to ever do this? So now he's back reviewing and I take it some folk haven't forgotten the past? Being ignorant I could never see why anyone capable of independant thought would pay attention to any reviewer other than when they talked about tangible things like build quality, price, features etc. Since we all hear differntly I don't care a whit what anyone else hears when it comes to a component I'm thinking about buying for my system. I want to hear it for myself first. I remember when I went to a little audio get together and heard my first T-amp. I'd read and heard people singing it's praises and when I heard it I was totally underwhelemed. Which just illustrates my point about all of us hearing differently. The folks there thought it sounded great. To them it did ; to me it sounded sterile and one dimensional.No wait, I'm one dimensional Or is that delusional?