All of my speakers are high efficiency designs. For any given size, you can optimize for bass extension or efficiency. I think my speakers are a good balance between efficiency and extension - They all sound good without subs, but all could benefit from them. Adding subwoofers does more than just provide deep bass extension. It also serves to smooth room modes by averaging. Where a null might appear from a single bass sound source, another can be placed to fill in the hole. In this way, multiple bass sound sources can be used to provide deeper and smoother bass.
