You'd be talking about something like a JBL 4430, a coveted speaker with some of the best performance of a JBL monitor; I'd like to get one. The 2235 is still superior to much of what is out there in a 15.....according to those in the know, the current crop has better power handling but not the low level resolution of some of the older, lower powered drivers.....Check out the link for more info, and then use those 2235's!! They really have unusually good response compared to most 15's in the 1000 hz range.....
