Ok, I give in. The Stage series 4's have been in the back of my mind from the first time I looked into them. I have a funny feeling this is the sleeping giant of sound quality in the Eminence wing of the Pi Catalog. I overlooked it back when I did my first Pi's because I wanted the deep bass. I have since discovered that the Theater 4 is great in my big room, but too much bottom end for the mid and small rooms in my house. I think the Stage 4 would be about right for a more intimate HI-Fi only setting.It seems to me that some Pi Speakers rigidly follow PiAlign and that some are an EBS variant. Also I suppose that some drivers and use plans tend to make a system better or worse for a closely coupled alignment that I have heard you speak of. Could you please give a few words about this, and specifically where the Stage 4 fits in the close coupled world. Is it a paragon of Pi-ness?and of course, please send me plans.Thomas
