Hello,I have followed with interest, the various mods to these horns, but am reluctant to stick stuff on my horns. I have now aquired a beat up set of 511bs to experiment with. Are these day and night improvments or more of slight improvement catagory? This sounds like a very positive approach to this problem. I don't quite follow your description of "between the driver and where the horn rapidly expands horizontally." Exactly where and how many layers (noted you said you added another layer...)did you apply this stuff? Would it be removable? I have never used dynamat products before. Did you attempt any deadening on the horns "lips" ? Haave heard this is also a worthwhile area to deaden as well. Thanks, Russellc
