Hello everybody! My first post here.I would like to listen to a One-Pi speaker before I take the plunge. I know I could build one, but before I make that kind of effort I would like to know what the end result would be like. My reference would be the BBC LS3/5A speakers which I have owned for about 25 years. Very musical, with a midrange to die for. But very inefficient (82db), which is why I am interested in the 97db-efficient One-Pi.I live in San Diego, California. I wrote to Wayne Parham and he suggested I post a message here. Perhaps some of you folks live nearby, have a pair of One-Pi's, and would not mind letting me come by to listen.Thanks, Al Lau
