

---

Subject: Re: NooBee Question

Posted by Dean Kukral on Thu, 27 May 2004 21:17:52 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Thanks. I got to thinking that a resistor in series and one in parallel would attenuate the level of the drivers without changing the resistance in the crossover design. I did not know what the design of an "l-pad," was, but the reference you gave makes that obvious! I wonder what the mathematical model is that they use to make the calculation to figure the drop in acoustic power. They probably ignore frequency.

---