hi Wayne,i am a total newbie to all of this but i have been lurking and drooling and dreaming here for a while. i'd like take a look at some of the cabinet plans to see if i think it is something i can tackle (when money and time are in more abundance). i am pretty sure i would want to build a Four Pi. i really like the idea of it being upgradeable to the Pro model (a guy can dream), so i guess when i take the plunge i should start with Stage or Premium kit as they have the same cabinet dimensions? To upgrade one of these to Pro, would i need to do anything more than swap out the components? oh, and just to make sure i am not making a mistake due to my ignorance, my plan would be to drive these with a solid state McIntosh MC 2505 (50 w/ch). i also have a pair of Antique Sound Labs 8 watt tube monoblocs that i might hook them up to just for kicks, but the speakers would really be for my mcintosh setup. does this sound like a good match for Four Pi's?so, can you email the plans that you think would be most appropriate for me to start with? any suggestions or comments would be appreciated! thanks!john
