First, Home Depot has the $199 Ryobi TS15 on sale at $147. I bought it and for a lightweight it's accurate with a better fence than most of the portables. NO more sawdust in the living room for me!Number two, and I hope Wayne you don't mind, a link to Bob Brines speaker-building site. He's buds with Martin King. I've been looking to try the single driver thing again and came across the FT 1600 on the Decware site. Plunked down $25 bucks for the plans. Nothing revolutionary, a mass loaded TL, but the directions Brines gives for how and when to cut the stock, glue up and clamp would be worth the cost for any DIY'er.This is really Craftsman Forum stuff but people are staying away from there in droves.
