Subject: Re: Crossover Electronics 101 Posted by Wayne Parham on Thu, 24 Mar 2005 00:46:13 GMT View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I generally put a resistor across drivers that are used with crossover capacitors in front of them. It's to damp the system, to reduce the amount of peaking between the capacitor and voice coil. See the "Crossover Electronics 101" documents for illustrations.

Page 1 of 1 ---- Generated from AudioRoundTable.com