I never brought the DJ gear into the home. I always thought pro stuff should be used in the club or hall, and at home use the smaller consumer grade stuff.After going to several business parties recently and a recent black-tie affair in a big hall, I have an urge to bring a stack into the home. The speakers were huge, the sound was like a giant wall crashing down at you, and not only did you hear the music, you felt it in your chest. Now that's what I call a sound system! Too bad they were clipping. I could hear the compression artifacts.Because my rooms aren't that large I'm a bit worried that the big drivers won't open up properly or have enough room to breath since they were designed for high output in mind (for concert halls, etc)-Henry
