

---

Subject: Re: Making sure y'all got that "top ten album covers info"

Posted by Wayne Parham on Thu, 27 May 2004 13:40:39 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Oh, now this is fun! "Pumpnickel Polka" You must have been buying records by the box. I've gotten some pretty good records that way, but there are always a few interesting ones in the mix. Dumpster Dives This is a record I got from a woman who said her husband was a big audiophile. She was getting rid of all her vinyl, so I gladly accepted the whole lot. Kinda says a lot, doesn't it? Here's another album from the same collection: So I guess Deadly Earnest lived with Feminine Fireworks. They were both in the same box. And here was another one, sort of like what happens when you combine the two: All jokes aside, the lady and her entire family are the nicest people you could ever want to know. I mean they are genuinely sweet souls. But I couldn't help but laugh at those album covers, and to think about the memories that must have been shared by my friends that gave me these records. I mean, what a combination, like James Carville and Mary Matalin!

---