Subject: Re: Which speaker offers horn bass that doesn't require corners? Posted by Wayne Parham on Tue, 14 Mar 2006 18:26:54 GMT View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Freestanding basshorns are huge. To have a real basshorn requires a cabinet the size of a refrigerator. Anything smaller is very peaky - I've seen some popular designs with as much as 15dB peaks within a single octave. I personally would do without. Go large or don't go at all hand, a good compromise is a midbass or even low midrange horn. You can horn load down to