Subject: OT- tubes at GPAF
Posted by Shane on Tue, 14 Mar 2006 22:03:39 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Posted this on the general forum, but may get more notice here.Ok folks, here's the deal. Sometime ago a guy I did some work for gave me about 1000 tubes for $100 plus what he owed me. I've picked through the lot and taken some driver tubes and the few power tubes that were in there. I've sold a few sets of the ham specific tubes on Fleabay, made my $100 back and decided that it is too much grief, trouble, and stress to sell any more there. I am not a salesman or business man and don't have the stomach for it. So, if anyone is interested in taking what's left off my hands for free I'll be more than willing to bring them to Tulsa. Realize that many of these are TV tubes, pulls, some are new, and the selection probably isn't that great but would be good to use when trying new circuits. If you want them you have to take them all---at least whats in that particular box (about 100-200 per box), no picking and choosing, cuz I don't want to bring any back. If you'd like a list of what I have I can email you a completed list and pics of what's in each box by this weekend.Also, I didn't state this on the general forum post, but one stipulation I would like to put on this is if anyone that wants them would not re-sell at least the audio tubes that they got, but didn't want. Rather pass them, the audio tubes, on to someone else who could use them--maybe someone new to the hobby. If you wanna try and sell the TV tubes be my guest.