I don't know how the reviews went, but I enjoyed the new version of the Time Machine (2002, whatever) better than the George Pal original. I got it when it hit the 50 cent remainder rack at the local store. I find gems in there but lots of clinkers too. There was even a retro 'sky car' in the Hallmark version of The Snow Queen. And I consider that anything with airships in it is steampunk. So the current Matrix knock-off called "Equilibrium" qualifies. Wild Wild West of course, and the Michael Moorcock Captain Bastable stories. Not enough good s-f film being produced these days. The tools are all there. But if you read about mother=mega-millionaire Peter Jackson from Lord of the Rings, the only idea he has for a new project is to remake King Kong.
